Wagner Building Sold in Newest Ocean Ave. Deal

Another valuable piece of Ocean avenue property changed hands last week when a four-store concrete building between Mission and San Carlos streets was sold to an unidentified purchaser through Barnet J. Segal, local realtor.

The building houses the Purity Grocery, Mission Meat Market, Mission Cleaners and the Smoke Shop.

The new owner, according to Segal, acquired the property as a business investment and the concerns now occupying the building will not be effected by the deal.

Segal declined to divulge the purchase price but stated that it was one of the biggest deals consummated here in recent years. He is not in a position to reveal the purchaser's name at this time.

This is the second major deal in Ocean avenue property this month. The Helen Wilson building, on the Theater of the Golden Bough Court, was sold recently to Malcolm Macbeth who plans to remodel the interior to provide two stores.

Blaze Increases Interest In New Fire Protection

Impetus was added to the movement for the formation of a fire district or districts to protect property outside the city limits of Carmel Wednesday morning when a defective flue started a fire in the home of Miss Alma Edler in Hatton Fields.

Fire Chief Robert Leidig, with the assistance of Councilman James Thoburn, Dave Machado and Stanley Clay responded to Miss Edler's call for help and were able to extinguish the blaze with water from a garden hose.

Residents of Hatton Fields, Carmel Woods and the Point are being aided by Chief Leidig and Carmel insurance agents in gathering data that will aid them in forming an independent fire district.

The latest proposal is that one district serve all of the outlying residence sections. This could be done if arrangements can be made for keeping the fire engine in Carmel, preferably in the new fire house. Such an arrangement would result in a material saving to the property owners, it was pointed out, and assure more efficient service.

What, No Jenny Lind? Old Theatre Shaken As Famous Myth Is Wrecked

Authentic data has wrecked another perfectly good myth which has added charm to the peninsula for many years.

At the annual meeting of the Monterey History and Art Association held in the First Theater building last week Mrs. Laura Bride Powers, in charge of both the Custom House and First Theater museums, presented old newspaper clippings to prove that Jenny Lind never sang in the old theater.

The managers of the famous singer, according to data gathered by Mrs. Powers, demanded a guarantee of $500,000 before bringing her to California. The money was not raised and for that reason the Swedish Nightingale never sang in the First Theater or any other theater in the state. Jack Swan, who founded the theater, encouraged the myth as it was good advertising for his pioneer playhouse, she asserted.

Plans were discussed at the meeting of the society for again staging plays in the historic building. Herbert Heron, local devotee of the drama, explained that only such plays as were popular in the 1850's could be produced in it and only a few, such as "The Drunkard" and "Fashion", were worth producing. He suggested that peninsula authors write plays to fit the stage and the period of its popularity.

Complete restoration of the old building is to be an objective of the association, Col. Roger S. Fitch, its president, announced.

The first piano to be brought to California is now in the museum, Miss Anne Norwood revealed, and Miss Margaret Hartigan played a few bars on it to prove that it was in working order.

Carmelites are well represented on the board of directors, which was re-elected. The board is composed of Mrs. Sidney Fish, Carmel Martin, S. F. B. Morse, F. P. Howard, Em-

CRIME DETECTION IS STUDIED BY POLICE

Every member of the Carmel police department is attending classes at the newly formed peace officers' school in Monterey which is being conducted for the benefit of police, deputy sheriffs and constables of Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties.

Chief of Police Robert Norton is attending the classes daily and is arranging the schedule of his department so that all patrolmen will be able to attend part of the classes without reducing the number of men on duty.

The problems of providing police protection for Carmel differ from those in other communities but the school is stressing certain basic principals in crime detection and prevention which should be mastered by every officer, Norton explained.

SNAG HOOK LEADS TO FINE

Charged with using illegal tackle in an attempt to catch steelhead at the mouth of the Carmel river, D. Dawson, of Carmel, appeared before Judge Ray Baugh last week and was fined $50. His snag hooks were ordered confiscated.

The arrest was made by Claude Apsley, of the state fish and game patrol, who was sent to Carmel with another patrolman with instructions to break up the practice of "snagging" which is said to be increasing at the mouth of the river each year.

Sibyl Anikeyev, Carmel photographer, had an exhibit of her portraits and pictorial work on display.

Gottfried Flivver Tangles With Laundry Truck and is Victor

Lee Gottfried drives a potent flivver. If you don't believe it ask Charlie Ely.

Gottfried was coming out of the 17 Mile Drive gateway at the top of Carmel hill Wednesday morning and Ely, driving a laundry truck, was heading north, cutting across the highway to make connections with the Pacific Grove road. Signals became tangled and so did the machines.

When it was all over, the truck was lying on its right side and the flivver was standing by with a bent bumper and a nicked right fender.

Ely suffered a bruised shoulder, but Gottfried was uninjured.

Red Flannels In Vogue As Frigid Blasts Continue

G. D. Fahrenheit and Anders Celsius couldn't get together on the general location of zero but both Fahrenheit and centigrade thermometers agree that it was cold in Carmel last week.

Fahrenheit addicts insist that the mercury sank to 24 degrees above zero while centigrade converts claim that it was 8 degrees below zero. Anyway, it felt more like the centigrade reading looked.

"Pop" Warner, custodian of Devendorf park, reported that the pool in the park was frozen solid Wednesday morning for the first time since it was constructed. Wet clothes hung out to dry froze solid. Many motorists who hadn't put gin in their radiators had them burst from freezing.

Carmel has no official thermometer but one INSIDE the Carnegie Coastal Laboratory registered 30 degrees Wednesday.

CLUB STUDIES BIRDS ON PENINSULA TOUR

A most enjoyable field trip was made by the bird section of the Carmel Women's club last week. Mr. Laidlaw Williams directed the expedition which proved to be both interesting and instructive.

The group met at the home of Mrs. Vera Peck Mills on San Antonio street and thence proceeded to the Carmel beach where the Snowy Plover, the Hudsonian Curlew and the Sandling were observed.

The next stop was the Hotel Del Monte where a stroll around the grounds proved profitable to the amateur ornithologists. Such birds as the Yellow Throat, Green-backed Goldfinch, Chestnut-backed Chickadees and numerous other birds were sighted.

Those who accompanied Mr. Williams were Mrs. Mills, Miss Katherine Carey of Pacific Grove, Mrs. E. J. Sherwin, Miss Rowena Beans, Mrs. Louise M. Hatton and Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Roper and Mrs. G. Batchelor Hall.

RED CROSS MAKES APPEAL

Caring for the homeless, sick and injured in the Ohio river flood area has placed an added burden upon the American Red Cross and residents of Carmel have been called upon to contribute their share of the $2,000,000 emergency fund which the national headquarters is attempting to raise.

C. W. Lee, president of the Carmel chapter, announced after receiving an urgent appeal from Admiral Cary T. Grayson, national chairman, that there would be no local drive but voluntary subscriptions will be received at both Carmel banks and at local headquarters on Dolores street.

Only artists who have found it necessary to hide their studios in remote spots so that they can work in peace and quiet can fully appreciate the difficulty under which two peninsula artists are painting a huge mural for the library of the Pacific Grove high school.

Because it offered the only available space for such a large job, August Gay and Bruce Ariss are doing their painting in the gymnasium of the Monterey Union High School. During the greater part of the day there is student activity on the floor and success of this activity seems to depend upon shouting and yelling.

But the noise is not all that disturbs Gay and Ariss. When basketball practice is on one of the artists has to stand guard to prevent the ball from bouncing into the canvas. Under these conditions the other artist is supposed to be concentrating and injecting feeling into the painting.

Aside from high school students and members of the faculty, but few persons have had an opportunity to view this unusual piece of work. Although they are taking advantage of artistic license in a rather large way and come perilously close to cartooning in the way they depict buildings and characters, their work has an underlying foundation that is true art.

The painting is being done in Hiler medium, which, in plain language, is a beeswax base for their pigment. This gives a pleasing, soft effect that will be fully appreciated under the lighting conditions in the library. The eye is carried from one end of the mural to the other by a planned line which waves in such a way as to give the work dynamic quality.

The panel they are working on at present is 60 feet long and 10 feet high. The panorama begins at the left with the municipal golf course

Carmel Council May Vote Money To Aid Airport

If the taxpayers favor the proposal, Carmel may go to the financial aid of Monterey and contribute two-tenths (about $800) of the amount necessary to complete the airport now under construction near Del Monte.

W. J. Crabbe, chairman of the transportation committee of the Monterey Chamber of Commerce, and John A. Davis, president of the commercial body, appeared before the city council Wednesday night and explained that Monterey had undertaken to sponsor the airport alone but can not hope to carry the project to a satisfactory completion unless Carmel and Pacific Grove come to its assistance.

A total of $53,000 in federal and Monterey funds is represented in the airport as it stands partially completed, Crabbe explained. The runways must be oiled so that safe landings will be assured under any weather condition, the pilots' and mechanics' quarters must be completed, doors provided for the hangar, which will have to be painted and wired for electricity, and a short road constructed to connect the field with the Castroville highway. It will require approximately $4,300 to complete the job he said.

Several of the councilmen expressed themselves as being in favor of the proposal but it was decided to postpone action upon it until the Feb. 3 meeting. "We want what the people want," Councilman Bernard Rowntree asserted. The public will be given an opportunity to express its views at the next meeting.

PERSONALLY SPEAKING

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miller Stewart, to Mr. Alferd Busch of Berkeley has been announced. The bride is a graduate of Miss Harker's school in Palo Alto and later attended Armstrong Business College where she and Mr. Busch met.

Mr. Busch, the son of Mrs. Mary Busch of Stockton, is assistant sales manager of the merchandise and appliance division of the General Electric Company.

The Carmel Missionary Society will meet this afternoon in the Community church. Miss Eva Wolcott Peck will review chapters two and three of the book being currently studied, "Congo Crosses."

Miss Maureen Plein, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Plein, was the honored guest at a pottery shower given by Mrs. Herbert McGuckin and Mrs. Harry Hilbert last week.

The guests were Mrs. W. Plein, the meeting asserted that the airport would be an asset to Carmel in many ways, particularly in speeding up air mail delivery. At present, air mail letters must go to San Francisco by train before being placed aboard mail planes, it was explained.

Councilman James Thoburn asserted that during the last two years it had been necessary for him to arrange emergency air transportation to San Francisco or Los Angeles for seven different persons.

If adequate provisions are made for the handling of large transport planes Monterey is expected to become a regular stop for at least one of the air lines operating between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Miss Theora Plein, Miss Aileen Plein, Mrs. Virginia Bruce, Mrs. Pearl Bennett, Mrs. Helen Ricketts, Mrs. J. Necker, Mrs. Lillias Rice, Mrs. Nellie Warren, Mrs. Merle Hilbert, Mrs. Blanche Carr, Mrs. Florence Allen, Mrs. Lois Deal, and Mrs. L. Benson.

Mrs. Gwendolyn Stearns "teased" several of her friends on Wednesday afternoon. Those in attendance were Miss Bailey, Mrs. Valentine Mott Porter, Mrs. Monteagle, Dr. and Mrs. Gardiner, Dr. MacDougall and Mr. Fitzgerald.

Mr. Don Blanding and Scotty Greager have left for two weeks in Texas where Mr. Blanding will lecture.

Colonel and Mrs. Edward Seeley-Smith entertained a number of their peninsula friends at a cocktail party on Saturday.

Colonel and Mrs. Rush Wallace and Miss Flora Stewart invited a few of their friends to their home at Pebble Beach last week to hear Mrs. Ralph Risley play. Mrs. Risley is an accomplished pianist whose home was in New York but who with her husband, Commander Risley, is now living in Carmel on Torres street.

PWA Workers To Count Our Dogs

The city council lost no time Wednesday night in placing enthusiastic approval upon a plan submitted by Earl Duclius, county sanitary inspector, for conducting a dog census on the peninsula without cost to the three communities.

The tabulation will be made by relief workers and will result in an accurate check on dogs and dog licenses, Duclius explained. While the canvass is being made the workers could compile reports for the communities on mosquito and rodent conditions, he said.

Enforcement of enacted and proposed dog control ordinances here presents a number of problems which must be worked out by the council. The principal problem is what to do with strays and unlicensed dogs that are picked up and who is to do the picking up.

Councilman Thoburn pointed out that Carmel has no pound in which to feed and shelter stray pooches and if such accommodations are provided it may be necessary to add a poundmaster to the city payroll. Its policemen, it is feared, might balk at the suggestion that they act as dog-catchers. The city, Thoburn pointed out, has access to the Animal Shelter in Monterey, but does not receive adequate service from that institution at present and could expect no better service if a serious drive against unlicensed dogs is launched.

through Mexico and are once again in their house in the Peninsula Country Club district.

Miss Katherine Cooke spent several days in Carmel last week as the house guest of Mrs. George Boke.

and the rocky point upon which the "New Crivello" is neatly wrecked and in its somewhat dizzy course takes the eye along the coast until it passes Monterey and ends up with the oil tanks beyond Del Monte.

The churches and mid Victorian architecture of many of the principal buildings in the Grove are caught as are the principal activities, including croquet. Touches of humor are injected here and there but the main idea of giving the mural historic value is never forgotten.

Two other panels are to be painted when this one is completed. These are to be placed across the ends of the library room and will be 40 feet long and 10 feet high.

The work is a PWA project. The city of Pacific Grove is furnishing all materials and the government is paying the artists. The project is so large that it may require more than a year for its completion.

Spontaneous Tribute To Carmel Dairy's Waffles

A waffle that doesn't QUITE waffle
Is worse than NOT GOOD . . . it's gosh-awffle
(like this rhyme) . . . but, ah me!
When it's done to a "T"
With plenty of syrup
It's a dainty to cheer up.
With plenty of butter . . .
They're utterly UTTER.

This tribute to the Carmel Dairy's Golden Waffles was given us after a famous poet had eaten THREE of our delectable waffles, one right after the other. As he said, "I'd have another except that while I can still chew I can't swallow any longer."

VALLEY PEARS BRING HIGH PRICE IN 1936

A total of 64,000 boxes or 100 carloads of fall and winter pears were shipped from Carmel Valley ranches in 1936 and the growers selling in gross lots received $135 more per car for their fruit than in 1935. These figures were announced at the sixteenth annual meeting of the Carmel Valley Fruit growers association held in Monterey Wednesday.

All officers of the organization were re-elected. They are Roy Meadows, president; Roy Martin, vice-president; Bernard Schulte, secretary-manager. Hatton J. Martin, Mrs. M. F. Stewart and the officers compose the board of directors.

A telegram was sent President Roosevelt urging him to intervene in the Pacific Coast maritime strike to prevent loss of markets and the backing up of fruit in California.

Coffee Chemists Claim Blending Masterpiece

Walt Pilot's coffee has done much to make his dairy lunch an institution here but Walt isn't the kind to rest on his laurels. Because he refused to rest, he believes that he has "scooped" the field on a new blend of coffee which he will unveil today, Tuesday.

Having been told that he had the best coffee in town, he developed the idea (seriously) of making it the best in the world. That may sound like a big order but here's what happened.

He learned that the government in Guatemala maintains a coffee laboratory that employs many chemists who do nothing but experiment with blends and methods of brewing coffee. He contacted the laboratory and confessed his ambition.

Five pounds of what those chemists believe to be the best blend that can be produced arrived Friday but Walt decided to keep it until this morning so that he could tell the public about it by means of an advertisement in The Californian.

In corresponding with the laboratory Walt learned that elevation has much to do with the flavor and strength of coffee. Beans produced near the sea level are mild but as the elevation increases the beans become stronger and develop other characteristics which have made coffee blending an art. Climatic conditions in certain localities in Central America are responsible for the production of a bean which is used exclusively in blending for aroma.

POST OFFICE IS ENLARGED
The addition being constructed in the rear of the post office in accordance with terms of the new lease taken by the government is rapidly nearing completion and should be in service within a few days, according to Edwin H. Ewig, owner of the property.

The addition will provide 238 square feet of floor space and will be used for storage and also provide space for more tables and cabinets.

Committee Insists Upon Advertising Carmel in Booklet

Carmel may be advertised whether the so-called art group approves of advertising or not.

A group of business men from Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove who form a publicity committee and plan to prepare and distribute literature publicizing the entire peninsula met in Monterey Wednesday to discuss their plans and were not inclined to take seriously protests made by Perry Newberry and other Carmelites who are opposed to advertising.

The group made it clear that Carmel is to receive a generous amount of publicity in the folder that is being planned. It was pointed out that Carmel has been advertising very effectively in the past by refusing to advertise.

Mrs. Kern, mother of Mr. Herman Kern, has arrived in Carmel for her annual visit and is greeting her many friends. At present Mrs. Kern is residing in Mrs. Katherine McFarland Howe's house on Casanova Street while Mrs. Howe is away.

E. L. Taylor accompanied by Mr. L. L. Benson drove to San Francisco last week to spend several days on business.

Richard Dyer-Bennet Here

One of the most interesting personalities to come to Carmel this year is Richard Dyer-Bennet. Recently returned from Europe, he has captured the imagination of all kinds of audiences by his lute playing and word pictures of the old troubadour life and songs.

Mr. Dyer-Bennet was born in England, his father was English and his mother American. He journeyed to Sweden to become a favorite disciple of the celebrated lute-singer, Sven Scholander, and it was his privilege to perform in the famous cellar-restaurant "Gyllene Freden" (Golden Peace) in Stockholm, which is endowed by the Swedish academy, and which is the rendezvous of artists from all over the world.

The instrument that Mr. Dyer-Bennet uses is of Scandinavian origin, having more strings and a deeper bass resonance than that of the earlier Grecian lute.

Just before his return to America he gave forty recitals, with unvarying and immediate success in England and Wales.

This coming week end, Mr. and Mrs. Dyer-Bennet will be the house guests of Miss Rowena Beans of Carmel Point. A group of friends will gather at the home of Mrs. Jesse Lynch Williams to meet the young artist and his wife on Saturday night.

An Idle Child Makes A Diligent Crook

(By O. B. Server)

In an era and region of few comforts and many hardships, much poverty and limited pleasures but with an abundance of pluck, perseverance and personal integrity, there was born in the Tennessee mountains, near Knoxville, a child who was to bear the name of David Glasgow Farragut.

This was more than one hundred and thirty-five years ago. America was young then. Tennessee was a frontier state. The civilization and culture of the period were primitive and simple. The schools were few and far between, crude log structures with hand hewed benches and desks. A huge fireplace in one end provided warmth. In another corner of the room stood an imposing bundle of hickory and willow withes. These were not for ornament. They were the symbols of discipline and measures of enforcing order and proper conduct.

Children attending these log school houses often trudged miles, on foot, over the mountains, through the woods and the rough and narrow trails. Parents at that time bought their own school books. The children brought their own lunches, such as they were. In many instances it consisted of parched corn and cracklings, the more opulent had corn bread sandwiches with home made sausage as the filler. Education was then attained by effort and individual energy. Withal, that the facilities were crude, and the curricula simple, it was the era that produced our greatest scholars, most eminent men of letters and illustrious statesmen. In this generation Emerson, Longfellow, Whitier and Bryant were born. They were the products of the "district schools", of the tallow candle period and achieved their renown before the modern method of educating by forced feeding from text books as the Strasbourg goose is fattened.

The children of this primitive time had few pleasures, games, and gratuities. The day began before dawn and ended long after dusk. Everybody worked. Children of six helped at milking, cut the firewood and did numerous chores some of which were arduous and fatiguing. The school season was short, generally three months. Vacation time found all busy. Boys and girls worked in the fields and helped in the woods splitting rails and clearing the land for cultivation.

Parents to a large degree had to look after the health of the family. Many a child was born without a doctor present. Home remedies were extensively used and every spring the whole family went through a drenching of sulphur and molasses and sassafras tea.

Despite these limitations and privations people prospered, were happy, neighborly and genuine. Children acquired at an early age the habits of industry, learned to use their heads and hands and did not grumble and growl when asked to perform menial and manual service. It made them robust and sturdy of body and limb. It trained their mental faculties, developed initiative, self-reliance. It promoted precocity, courage and high ideals.

At ten or twelve years old they were able to do a man's part and they did ungrudgingly and with efficiency.

Such was the environment and association of David Glasgow Farragut in his early childhood. His father was a Spaniard from the island of Minorca. He came from the stock of the conquistadores, strong in courage and unconquerable in spirit. He was a soldier in our War of the Revolution. When his boy, David, was eleven he had him entered in the U. S. Navy as a midshipman. He joined Captain Porter on the good ship Essex. The elder Farragut had once been its Master. No easy life for a boy of eleven. Then as now there were some tough characters on ships and at sea. The war of 1812 was on. Life in the navy was not only hard but it was dangerous, full of adventure and the ships were none too comfortable or well equipped. Young Farragut was soon to experience exciting service. He was present and participated in the battle with the English ships, Cherub and Phoebe, taking a gallant part and earning the confidence of his commander. When he had reached the ripe age of TWELVE he was placed in command of a naval prize ship, taken in battle. Think of it, a boy of twelve intrusted to the command of a ship of war. Are we turning out such material today? What of his education and early opportunities? Born in the Tennessee backwoods. The story of his later life is well known. It is an epic of courage, exalted character and indomitable will. Through his own application he became a scholar and an eminent linguist. Rough life at sea, war and adventure did not soil or sully his character. He was profoundly religious, gentle, kindly and always the gentleman.

What was the secret of his astounding accomplishments? Industry, Integrity, and Initiative. He was not afraid to work. He began to work as a child, learning in childhood the lessons of life, his body, mind, soul expanded and his spirit strengthened.

What we need today is a school of training, experience and instruction that will turn out Farraguts, not gigolos and hitch-hikers. Let children grow callouses on their hands and not on their souls.

Editorial

We desire to emphasize again the necessity for definite action concerning the venerable old Theater of the Golden Bough. We urge the good lady and the gentlemen who guide the destiny of Carmel to spend a very few minutes investigating the condition of the building. 'Tis truly on the verge of collapse. And besides, its ghosts deserve respect.

Commissioner James H. Thoburn is to be congratulated on the excellent job his men are doing with the parking curb. If the new curbs are not a decided improvement, dented fenders and scarred bumpers are things of great beauty.

As regards the steelhead which spawn in the Carmel river, or would if they could, it appears that some definite conclusions should be arrived at in order that the situation may become clarified. What is the value of these steelhead? They are one of the gamest fish that swim, and as such provide sport only a fisherman can appreciate. Are they becoming extinct? In the Carmel River this year there are thousands fewer than ever before. Why are there fewer? Because of sea lions, spawn eating trout and that louse, the unscrupulous fisherman. What can be done to re-establish them? Shoot the sea lions, squash the lice, exterminate the trout? No!! Induce the great State of California Fish Hatchers to catch the steelhead in the Carmel River and elsewhere, unburden them of their spawn, raise to fingerlings and then return them strong and healthy to the world of their ocean.

The Californian is strongly convinced that the city of Carmel should contribute the desired $800 toward the completion of the Monterey airport. The arguments for such a contribution far outweigh whatever sentiment there may be against it.

A first class airport would facilitate the air mail service, provide a means of quick exit and entry to Monterey Peninsula and permit many wholly desirable persons to come here who, due to transportation difficulties at present, prefer to overlook the advantages of our peninsula. And what's more, a meaningless, half completed airport is a pathetic thing.

The only argument against the contribution is the $800.

Joseph Danysh, regional director of the WPA Arts Projects, made known to us the other day the ideal underlying his work. He employs government money to make the United States "art conscious." This is being done by presenting schools with art-worthy murals, by taking exhibits to isolated communities which have never seen them and by furnishing talented men and women an opportunity to express themselves. All this is being done in the hope that some day there will be a demand for artistic endeavour, thus permitting even artists to live. We tax-payers need not begrudge the sacrifice of a few of our pennies to so worthy an ideal.

MAN BITES DOG

BY MYRON BRINIG

Excessive cold in the North West and on the Pacific Coast, floods in the Ohio Valley, strikes in the Maritime and Automobile industries, influenza epidemics—the news this week is none too cheerful. But Mr. Roosevelt smiled all through the inauguration ceremonies, through a downpour of rain and even when Chief Justice Hughes swore him in to his high office. Evidently, Mr. Roosevelt can smile through anything, which is more than most of us can do.

They're still discussing Edward, the former King of England at dinners and cocktail parties. At first everyone was very sympathetic to him, but lately opinions have changed. From being a romantic hero he has become something of a quitter. Edward said in his radio address that he couldn't go on without the woman he loved. But hundreds of thousands of British soldiers went to the trenches without the women they loved. They were wounded without the women they loved nearby to nurse them and sympathize with them. They died without the women they loved. Apparently, Edward forgot all about this when he gave up the throne.

"Gone With The Wind" Margaret Mitchell's best-selling novel has sold a million copies. There's going to be a "Gone With The Wind" movie. There are "Gone With The Wind" hats, shoes, hair-cuts, perfumes, underwear and cosmetics. I'm thinking of calling my house in Carmel "Gone With The Wind" because sometimes when I wake up at night it feels that way.

Robinson Jeffers who lives in Carmel is regarded by many as America's greatest poet. Mr. Jeffers is wise. You rarely see him at parties and in public places. He knows that there's a difference between singing "Sweet Adeline" and "Roan Stallion." Any drunk can sing "Sweet Adeline" but it takes a clear head to write and sing "Roan Stallion."

While down with the flu last week I spent a few days and nights in the Monterey Hospital. I can't compare it with other hospitals because I've never been in any other. But the food was fine, the nurses were beautiful and expert and the tariff was reasonable. I believe all nurses should be beautiful even when your temperature goes up as a consequence. Give me a beautiful nurse and a high temperature and I'm happy. I'm happy because I'm out of my head. Anyway, I want to repeat that the Monterey Hospital is okey-doke.

Maybe the Carmel Hospital is, too, I haven't been there yet. Maybe next time I get a temperature.

Speaking of kidnapping (and a very unpleasant subject it is) I believe that the payment of ransoms should be prohibited by law. A kidnapper, unless he's a fiend, might hesitate before committing a crime, if he realized there was to be no money in it.

The Wideners of Philadelphia spent $55,000 to 'bring out' their daughter, Joan Peabody. At the same time we read in the San Francisco Chronicle, a conservative newspaper, that a girl faints in the street from lack of food. She was kicked out of her room because she hadn't the money to pay her rent. Life is full of odd happenings like these. The moral is: It's better to be brought out than kicked out. Anybody can be kicked out, but you've got to be a relative of the Wideners to be brought out.

We'll all be happy when the flu goes floozy. But until then don't go sea-bathing in the nude, don't go necking on Point Lobos, and don't worry. If you must be in a crowd, pick one near a bar.

Carmel Lights

There has been a frosty halo around the Carmel Lights these last few days as the village experienced what old time residents say is the coldest spell in history.

Water pipes and automobile radiators were frozen, bird baths, lily ponds, and fish ponds, were covered with ice; garden hoses lay like rigid snakes and even faucets which were left dripping as a precautionary measure boasted icicles in the morning.

Lack of water in the mornings became a real problem. One of the most ingenious ways of solving it was that of the fair young Carmelite who washed her face in the morning with the contents of her hot-water bottle which was the only liquid to be found.

Even the horses suffered. At the Pebble Beach stables the troughs were frozen over and had no sooner thawed out at midday than they began to freeze again. And so we saw Jim Carpenter, he of the delightful Irish brogue, making a hot toddy for the animals.

"A job we would not have enjoyed was that of Joe Perry, of the San Carlos Riding Stables. Every morning at five o'clock he set out for a snow-covered ranch near King City to get a load of hay. He told us he would much rather have faced the mountain lion to which we referred last week.

The saddest story to come to our notice, however, was Mrs. Katherine Smith's experience with freezing and thawing. Like many another Carmel resident, Mrs. Smith awoke one morning to find her water-pipes frozen. She turned on the faucet and getting no results, went off to work. Hours later, neighbors on Junipero street saw a young river cascading out of her front door. They did what they could to stem the tide and sent out an S. O. S.

Mrs. Smith returned to find the kitchen all nicely mopped up and shining.

"That's fine," she said. "It looks so nice, thank you."

"Oh, yes," replied the neighbors, "but you ought to see the bedroom."

She opened the door and as she did so a small mat went gaily floating by. The water was six inches deep and the fact that through lack of sufficient closet space she had stored all of her linen on the floor did little

LOS PADRES FOREST

The Santa Barbara National Forest is no more. Instead "Los Padres National Forest" covering many acres in Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, Ventura, San Luis Obispo, Monterey and Kern counties will greet you from text books, maps and sign posts.

Because the forest was scattered over the six counties some of them resented the fact that it was named after one; hence the change.

Los Padres National Forest will be a historic reminder of eight missions within or near its boundaries: San Carlos at Carmel, San Buenaventura, Santa Barbara, Santa Ynez Purissima, San Luis Obispo, San Miguel, and San Antonio de Padua.

All Over the Place With Irene Alexander

By IRENE ALEXANDER

Last week I helped a friend of mine settle herself into a new home. Which means I dropped by around tea time, started to unpack her library, and faded right out of the picture.

For on top of the first box was a perfect armful of Guest Books—the literary scintillations of an army of relatives, friends and acquaintances who had passed through her door. Not inspiring reading, but withal profitable to me.

I've always been afraid of Ye Guest Book.

Its personality baffled me.

You know how it rises up off the table when you arrive at a party, curtsies prettily and then retires into the background like a well-behaved child. And pays not the slightest bit of attention during the hours when your wit sparkles and you toss off your cleverest bon mots—Just lies there waiting, with tongue in cheek—Ready to sidle up in your moment of low ebb and demand a statement for posterity, signed and dated.

We had nightmares in which a portfolio of my own jottings in Guest Books was thrust into my hand, and I was sentenced to de-claim them before my severest critics.

Imagine Boswell piecing Johnson together from a mass of coy Guest Book couplets!

For there's something about a Guest Book which lures one subtly into the quicksands of poetic expression.

It's plainly an insult to the hostess' caviar and crepes Suzettes if one can't think up a rhyme for both.

And oh, the agony of such endeavor at two-fifteen A. M., with your fellow guests watching you chew your pencil, their own faces alight with the calm glow of inspiration!

Well, anyway, I just wanted to give you a rough idea of how I used to feel about the Carmel Guest Book.

That was before I had done my serious reading in it—quite the last place in the world I expected to find an idea lurking. And I found several.

The names I encountered were what struck me at first.

I wonder if there is another spot in this country which has played host to so many dreamers of dreams.

Almost unconsciously I began analysing and classifying them—rich man, poor man, beggarman, thief, painters, poets, playwrights—

Those who came once—the ones who returned over and over—the ones who never went away.

Gradually an interesting pattern emerged.

Interesting, and a little sad, too.

It seemed to point up the essential loneliness of genius, the fact that it never quite mingles with the rest of us—that we never really get to know it well.

Perhaps it is a kind of consolation prize we offer to near-genius that we clasp it so warmly to our hearts.

Or maybe that's a childish defiance we hurl in the direction of aloofness—a way of saying to genius; Look, Genius, look at all the fun

MISSION RANCH CLUB PARTY AUSPICIOUS

The Mission Ranch Club had an auspicious opening on Saturday night, with a large and happy group of people enjoying the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Tevis.

Allen Knight's orchestra provided the dance music. A buffet supper was served to the guests.

Of the two hundred dancers present the following is a list of a few who were glimpsed:

Messrs. and Mesdames: Guy Koepp, Richard Masten, Carmel Martin, Martin Flavin, Harold Gates David Trevvett, Denny W. Roper, John Douglas Short, Ross Miller, Don Stanford. Mesdames Ruth Austin, Libbey Ley, Elizabeth Curran. The Misses Marjorie Lee Davis, Rosa Miller, Madeline Higley and the Messrs. Leon Walker, Byington Ford, Ross Burton, Frank Work, Lloyd Tevis, Jr., Laidlaw Williams, Lloyd Weer, Winsor Josselyn, Thomas Hooper, George Aucourt, Lewis Josselyn, Will Claywell, Jr., and Lieutenants Chas. Leydecker and Frederick Barnes.

But there was more to the pattern I noticed than this.

Among all the talented folk to whom Carmel has played host, where, I asked, are the composers? Why so few in number? Has it to do with Carmel, the place?

Is it because the peculiar key in which nature sounds here-through the pines—is distracting rather than stimulating to the artist who creates in sound?

But at any rate, there are all the others—whether it be for years, or for a moment, Carmel has played host to them all.

They lie hidden in the Guest Book, caught off guard, and a little distorted.

And inaccessible to the ones who might draw the most stimulation from their presence here—the shifting and impersonal public, who have not had their vision clouded by sharing the caviar and crepes Suzettes.

Why not a Carmel Guest Book in a larger sense?

Monterey has one—you may read it plainly as you pass up and down the streets, recreating for yourself the life that once centered about the First Theatre, the old Custom House, the home of Robert Louis Stevenson, the old Presidio—

It would not be necessary to ape Monterey, for here we are concerned with our guests rather than the soil on which they stood.

There is a movement afoot to turn the Forest Theatre into a city park. Why not make it the town Guest Book?

With a row of seats carved by Carmel's own artists, each commemorative of a significant visitor.

sent the following is a list of a few who were glimpsed:

Messrs. and Mesdames: Guy Koepp, Richard Masten, Carmel Martin, Martin Flavin, Harold Gates David Trevvett, Denny W. Roper, John Douglas Short, Ross Miller, Don Stanford. New Parking Work Begins

In an effort to prevent further damage by automobiles to the parkway on Ocean avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde streets, the street department has transferred its activities to that location. The parkway between Dolores and San Carlos streets will be the third block to be landscaped.

The parkway in the center of the Pine Inn block is faced with a soft sandstone which suffered during the recent heavy rains. The stone has crumbled in several places and parking cars have done much damage to planted sections which separates them. The sandstone is to be replaced with granite.

Parking conditions were restored to normal with the removal of the barrier ropes in the Lincoln-Dolores sector. It was necessary to keep cars from bumping into the new rock-work until the cement had time to set.

NEW TELEPHONE BOOK

If your old green covered telephone directory contains any mementos of importance to you, be sure to remove them now.

This bit of advice was given today by Robert P. Sexton, local manager for the telephone company, who said delivery of a new February directory was to be made during the week of January 25 to some 13,500 telephone subscribers in Monterey and San Benito counties.

The new 154-page book is bound in grey cover and lists names of telephone subscribers in 48 cities, towns and communities in the two counties.

Distribution is scheduled for completion by January 29.

Forest Theater Accepted By City

With no voice having been raised in protest, the city council voted at an adjourned session Wednesday night to accept the Forest Theater property as a gift to the city from the Carmel Club of Arts and Crafts. The property is to be used for park, playground and dramatic purposes.

Upon his return from Sacramento, City Attorney Argyll Campbell will be instructed to prepare the necessary papers of conveyance and these are to be passed upon and the deal completed at a meeting of the stockholders of the corporation to be held in the near future.

The motion to accept the property was made by Councilman Clara Kellogg. Councilman Bernard Rowntree then moved to instruct the city attorney to complete the transaction.

Several persons residing near the Forest Theater sought and were given assurance that the city would not tolerate any noisy activity in the park that would disturb them.

Ten other lots in a canyon below the Forest Hill School were acquired by the city for park and playground purposes. Mrs. Caroline Benson Under, owner of the school, accepted the city's offer of $450 for five of the lots and agreed to give the city five others so that plans for a proposed park in the canyon might be carried out.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mathews of Monterey had as their house guests last week Mr. Biddle Dorcy who spent a few hours in Carmel incognito.
